Also, note the absence of a tag in div (1). Is it possible to use jQuery to uniquely identify the presence of either or (and of neither) so as to strip out the suppress attribute and preserve the rest of the inner HTML of the div? A: Update: For modern browsers see below. For legacy browsers you may want to look into the Element object to see what methods are available (scroll down to the comments).

$(').addClass('all-suppress'); // class name $(').get(0).className; // "all-suppress"
$(').css('display', 'none'); // style $(').attr('alt', 'foo'); // attributes // for legacy browsers
Element.prototype.className = Element.prototype.className || function(){return
this.className.toString();} Element.prototype.setAttribute = Element.prototype.setAttribute || function(attr){this.setAttribute(attr, "true");return this;};

More than 3,000 people attended a funeral for a teenager fatally shot by a Port St. Lucie police officer last year, it was reported Sunday, and police set up a closed-circuit television system at the church to monitor media coverage. The wake for 17-year-old Eddie Riley was held Sunday at the New Life Baptist Church on Cedar Avenue, the St. Petersburg Times reported. Three Port St. Lucie police officers have been on paid administrative leave since July, when video was released showing officers Daniel Pantaleo and Brian Shipley approaching and apprehending Riley on the street. The two officers did not comply with their department's policy that called for them to not touch suspects who were not under arrest. During a press conference on the shooting on Monday, St. Lucie County Sheriff Ken J., said the officers did the right thing that night, despite the incident being "very tragic." He added that he's been in law enforcement for more than 30 years, and the officers were "smart, well-trained, and did the right thing." J. said that he doesn't expect any other officers to be fired because of the shooting. Port St. Lucie's City Manager Jon Mender said he is considering whether the officers violated department policy in the shooting, or if they should be reprimanded. "In my mind, we have to look at our policies, look at our procedures, and determine whether or not we need to reevaluate any of those," he said, according to the Times. In the wake of the shooting, some residents have had a heated discussion about whether to cover up the surveillance video. Port St. Lucie resident Tara Harris is one of many who was angry when a local news station refused to show the video. "The public has a right to know 50b96ab0b6
